Murray, UT --November 18, 2008—Cameo College's Student Council has been hard at work. A month ago, the students raised close to $1000 to support American troops in Iraq. Their goal was to create care packages for soldiers containing necessary items like sunscreen, chapstick and toothbrushes.

"We're sending a lot of the Rock Star," Angela Reynolds told us, "Energy drinks are the number one requested item."

Over the weekend, Cameo's student council members collected and boxed their donations for shipping. "There is a sense of accomplishment, seeing a project through from start to finish," said one participating student.

"We also added personalized messages to show our appreciation."

Although students at Cameo College focus on hair, skin and nails, they are encouraged to develop a sense of community. "There is definitely a spirit of service at Cameo that extends beyond hair care and spa services," says Student Council Advisor Robert Moody.

One of Cameo's biggest and most well known community events is coming up this Wednesday, November 19th, at Murray High School. The Icons Hair Show Competition will feature the creative work of seventeen exceptional students. All proceeds from the evening will go to the Cut It Out program, an organization dedicated to mobilizing stylists and community members against domestic violence and abuse. Also, one lucky attendee will win a full-scholarship to the Cosmetology Program and the opportunity to be part of the Cameo College experience.
